Bids.	Invoicing.
Connecting with banks for expenses.	Printing checks - they only offer one vendor and they are expensive compared to QuickBook alternatives.
Their interface for bids - retainers and applying them against income could be improved, but once you know how it's easy.	Their recurring fees don't seem to always work the way I'd want. But overall they work.

Tracking project timesheets	Allowing clients to view past and current invoices
Review our financial performance through the use of dashboards & reports	Complexity of reporting can make it difficult to find the report you need
Entering mileage can be a bit complicated	Attaching receipts to keep track of expenses would be easier if it could connect to our bank account more readily

The dashboard gives a lovely overview of all things finance. Its a great at-a-glance way to track your financial health and waves.	Recurring invoices. 'Nuff said. Before discovering this feature, I dreaded the monthly invoices. This feature has cut my invoicing time in half. Maybe even more. Fantastic!
Timesheets from Zoho Projects can also be integrated into the invoicing process. Which cuts back on the website switching and transering of information. Its all in one place here!	A faster, cleaner interface would be great. The ability to quickly edit client info without being taken to a new page would speed up the process.
